Caring for your new tree

Watering your tree(s) is vital to the survival after transplanting. This will allow the tree to re-establish a strong root system.

Please follow these guidelines to give your tree(s) the best possible chance for success:

Deep soakings are better for trees than frequent shallow waterings. The soil should be kept moist at all times.

- For trees planted in April or May water on days 1 and 5, and then again on weeks 2, 3, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, and 16. Cease watering mid-September.
- For trees planted in June water on days 1, 5, 10, and 15 and then again on weeks 4, 6, 8, and 10. Cease watering mid-September.
- For trees planted in July water on days 1, 5, 10, and 15 and then again on weeks 4, 6, and 8. Cease watering mid-September.
- For trees planted in August water on days 1, 5, 10, and 15 and then again on week 4. Cease watering mid-September.
- For trees planted in September water on days 1 and 5 and then again on weeks 2 and 3.
- For trees planted in October, November, or December water once on day 1.

Note: It is not necessary to water trees on weeks that provide ≥ 1 " of rain.
